CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

Elsewhere, in Spain protestors for Catalonian independence continue to hold massive demonstrations in public spaces, with over 500,000 people from both sides marching in Barcelona over the weekend. In Haiti, the late Thursday killing of a journalist who had closely covered the impoverished nation's political and economic crisis sparked days of violent protests. The country's government is said to be on the brink of collapse, as calls for President Jovenel Moise to resign become deafening. GETTY IMAGES

Anti-government demonstrators swarm a military vehicle as they protest against cost of living increases on October 20, 2019 in Santiago, Chile. President Sebastian Piñera suspended the 3.5% subway fare hike and declared the state of emergency for the first time since the return of democracy in 1990. Protests had begun on Friday and developed into looting and arson, generating chaos in Santiago, Valparaiso and a dozen of other cities. For more, see page 11.

3 London
Anti-Brexit protesters take part in 'Together for the Final Say' rally on October 19, 2019, in London, UK. A few days before Brexit becomes a reality, one of the biggest public protests in British history took place in London. More than a million people participated in mass outside parliament to deliver a message loud and clear to the government and MPs that they should trust the people, not Boris Johnson, to solve the Brexit crisis. At the Parliament Square, speeches were given from leading cross-party politicians and celebrity voices who support a People's Vote. For more, see page 6.

Did You Know?

5 Tips to Remember to Avoid Being a Victim of Medical Malpractice

1. Read and Understand for Yourself - Whenever you're given a new prescription or results of a medical test, read all you can about it, then ask whatever questions you have. Don't be embarrassed to ask questions. Be an advocate for yourself!

2. Get a Second Opinion about your Upcoming Procedure before it Occurs - Before any non-emergency medical procedure, it is a good idea to get a second opinion. Getting a second opinion is not a matter of not trusting your doctor, it is a matter of being an educated patient.

3. Bring a Loved One or Friend - When undergoing a serious medical procedure, bring a loved one or friend who can be your "eyes" and "ears" and help you think through important decisions. Having a second pair of eyes and ears may help keep you out of harm's way.

4. Get the Best Care Possible - Perhaps the most effective way to avoid medical error is to avoid substandard physicians. The best way to prevent this is to research potential doctors before committing. If you ask the right questions and perform the right research, you will be well on your way to finding the right doctor and reducing your chances of being a victim of medical malpractice.

5. Contact Fodera & Long, P.C. - If you believe that you or a loved one have been a victim of medical malpractice, contact the experienced lawyers at Fodera & Long, P.C. at (215) 569-1212 or www.foderalawfirm.com.

Fire department personnel continue to clean up the site of a four-alarm fire that occurred on Sunday on the 200 block of Chestnut Street in Old City, Philadelphia.

Feds say brothers planned mass Old City fire

Imad Dawara and Bahaa Dawara are facing a slew of charges for 2018 fire.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Two brothers who owned businesses in Old City are facing 20 years in jail after being charged with arson for allegedly starting a 2018 fire that displaced hundreds of people.

The fire took place in February 2018 and left a building severely damaged, causing the demolition of an apartment building at 239 Chestnut St. This fire displaced around 160 residents in the area, PhillyVoice reported.

The brothers are Imad Dawara, 39, from Swarthmore, and Bahaa Dawara, 31, from Woodlyn. They are American citizens who were born in Syria. They owned several properties, such as clubs and restaurants, from 2012 to 2018.

The brothers are facing multiple felony charges, including arson, conspiracy, wire fraud, mail fraud and more. It was reported that the brothers allegedly lied under oath about their whereabouts during the fire. It was also reported that in an indictment, they outlined a plan involving insurance fraud for one of their prior businesses, a former hookah bar.

The pair were reportedly struggling with their Chestnut Street businesses, Barra and B-Side Hookah Bar. Both businesses were joined together on the same property.

Prosecutors said the brothers had a history of fighting with their landlord and they reportedly violated a 2015 lease. They did not have the correct permits to keep either business running and were behind on payments, according to reports.

Imad Dawara allegedly threatened the landlord, saying that if they were evicted, they'd destroy the property. In November 2015, the Philadelphia Court of Commons prohibited the brothers from running their businesses because they did not possess the correct permits.

The landlord allegedly sent the brothers a notice of intent to terminate their lease. Two years later, in October 2017, they closed all their operations. But because the brothers didn't have a lease, they couldn't sell the space. Allegedly, the brothers owed the landlord $64,000 in overdue payments. They were told to vacate the space on February 2, 2018.

Iman Dawara allegedly reached out that day to an insurance broker about a policy covering an accidental fire, despite the business being closed. It was reported that the coverage would have included $250,000 for business interruption and an additional $500,000 for property damage.

On February 18 at 3:11 a.m., the brothers allegedly started the fire in the basement of the Chestnut Street property. The street was closed for months and several businesses shuttered.

And the saga continues...

The British government insisted on Sunday the country will leave the European Union on Oct. 31 despite a letter that Prime Minister Boris Johnson was forced by parliament to send to the bloc requesting a Brexit delay.

The Brexit maelstrom has spun wildly in the past week between the possibility of an orderly exit on Oct. 31 with a deal that Johnson struck on Thursday and a delay after he was forced to ask for an extension late on Saturday.

Johnson's defeat in the British parliament over the sequencing of the ratification of his deal exposed the prime minister to a law passed by those opposed to a no deal departure, demanding he request a delay until Jan. 31.

Johnson sent the request note as required, but unsigned, and added another signed letter arguing against what he cast as a deeply corrosive delay. One of his most senior ministers said Britain would still leave the bloc on Oct. 31.

"We are going to leave by October 31. We have the means and the ability to do so," Michael Gove, the minister in charge of no-deal Brexit preparations, told Sky News.

"That letter was sent because parliament required it to be sent ... but parliament can't change the prime minister's mind, parliament can't change the government's policy or determination."

In yet another twist to the running Brexit drama, Johnson sent three letters to Donald Tusk, the president of the European Council.

First, a brief cover note from Britain's EU envoy explaining that the government was simply complying with the law; second, an unsigned copy of the text that the law, known as the Benn Act, forced him to write; and a third letter in which Johnson said he did not want an extension.

"I have made clear since becoming Prime Minister and made clear to parliament again today, my view, and the Government's position, that a further extension would damage the interests of the UK and our EU partners, and the relationship between us," Johnson said in the third letter, signed "Boris Johnson".

The EU, which has grappled with the tortuous Brexit crisis since Britons voted 52%-48% to leave in a 2016 referendum, was clearly bewildered by the contradictory signals from London.

Tusk said he had received the request from Johnson and would start consulting EU leaders on how to react.

French President Emmanuel Macron told Johnson that Paris needed swift clarification on the situation after Saturday's vote, an official at the French presidency told Reuters.

"He (Macron) signaled a delay would be in no one's interest," the official said.

It was unlikely that the EU's 27 remaining member states would refuse Britain's request, given the impact on all parties of a no-deal Brexit. Diplomats said on Sunday the bloc would play for time rather than rush to decide, waiting to see how things developed in London.

Gove said the risk of no deal had increased and the government would step up preparations for it, including triggering its "Operation Yellowhammer" contingency plans.

"We cannot guarantee that the European Council will grant an extension," Gove said. REUTERS

Facebook open to currency-pegged stablecoins for Libra project

There's a new cryptocurrency in town and it's called Libra.

REUTERS

Facebook Inc, facing growing skepticism about its digital currency project Libra, on Sunday said the initiative could use cryptocurrencies based on national currencies such as the dollar, instead of the synthetic one it initially proposed.

David Marcus, who heads the Libra project for Facebook, told a banking seminar the group's main goal remained to create a more efficient payments system, but it was open to looking at alternative approaches for the currency token it would use.

"We could do it differently," he said. "Instead of having a synthetic unit ... we could have a series of stablecoins, a dollar stablecoin, a euro stablecoin, a sterling pound stable coin, etc." Marcus told the panel.

"We could definitely approach this with having a multitude of stablecoins that represent national currencies in a tokenized digital form," he said. "That is one of the options that should be considered."

Marcus said he was not suggesting currency-pegged stablecoins were the group's new preferred option.

"What we care about is the mission and there are a number ways to go about this," Marcus told Reuters after the panel, adding that the Libra needed to "demonstrate a lot of agility."

The Facebook-led project suffered severe setbacks earlier this month, as major payment companies Mastercard Inc and Visa Inc became the latest partners to quit the group behind the project.

Other key members that have pulled out included Stripe, eBay Inc and Booking Holdings Inc and PayPal Holdings Inc.

Global policymakers and regulators have also worry that creation of a new synthetic global currency could upend the global financial system, threaten users' privacy, and facilitate money laundering.

Group of 20 finance leaders on Friday agreed to set strict regulations on cryptocurrencies and said such stablecoins should not be issued until various global risks were addressed.

Marcus told Reuters that Facebook was still aiming for a June 2020 launch of Libra, but acknowledged it could miss that target due to regulatory hurdles.

"We'll see. That's still the goal," Marcus told Reuters when asked if the recent departure of several major partners from the project would delay the planned 2020 launch.

"We've always said that we wouldn't go forward unless we have addressed all legitimate concerns and get proper regulatory approval. So it's not entirely up to us," he said. REUTERS

Two unrelated Philadelphia shootings leave 2-year-old girl dead and 11-month-old baby boy in critical condition

A young child died Sunday afternoon along the 3300 block of North Water Street in North Philadelphia as the result of a triple shooting, ABC reports.

At approximately 3:30 p.m., a shooter opened fire on a Kensington home, with bullets striking a 2-year-old girl, her 24-year-old mother and a 33-year-old man. The child was shot in the back of the head; her mother received gunshots to both the right side and back; the man was shot in the stomach. The 2-year-old died at the scene while the other two victims were transported to an area hospital. The girl's mother is said to be in stable condition, while the man's condition is listed as critical.

This outbreak of violence follows hot on the heels of another horrific incident taking place in the city on Saturday night, when an 11-month-old baby was shot four times inside of a moving vehicle, again in North Philadelphia.

The baby was riding in a car with her grandmother who heard gunfire and exited her vehicle to find the car's exterior riddled with bullet holes and the baby injured, USA Today reports. Shots struck the back of the baby boy's head, chest and buttocks, police reported. The unidentified baby remains in critical condition and a $5,000 reward for information on the shooter is being offered by the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 5.

Stating his mood as one of outrage, disgust and heartbreak, Philadelphia Mayor Jim Kenney offered the following statement:

"Philadelphians should not live in fear of violence that could take away a child's life, but for too many this is a sad reality. With the flow of illegal guns and drugs unabated, we must do whatever we can locally to help address this issue. Our administration will have teams in the neighborhoods impacted by this weekend's violence to provide the resources available, specifically trauma-informed care, and the Police Department is conducting a full investigation and will have whatever resources they need to bring these perpetrators to justice."

Trump abandons plan to host 2020 G7 meeting at his Florida golf resort

Heavily criticized plan shut down almost as soon as it was announced.

U.S. President Donald Trump abandoned plans late on Saturday to host next year's Group of Seven summit at his Florida golf resort, after Democrats and others had decried the selection as evidence of the president misusing his office for personal gain.

In a series of tweets, Trump said he would drop the plan announced Thursday by White House acting chief of staff Mick Mulvaney to host the meeting at Trump National Doral golf resort near Miami from June 10 to 12. Trump cited what he termed "Crazed and Irrational Hostility" from Democrats and the news media in explaining the reversal. "We will begin the search for another site, including the possibility of Camp David, immediately," he wrote.

The Republican president faces criticism and a number of congressional investigations over his finances and potential conflicts of interest stemming from his real estate business, which he still owns, and an impeachment inquiry into accusations that he pursued political interests in his dealings with Ukraine.

On Saturday, Trump sought in his unusual reversal to emphasize what he said were the resort's positive features for hosting a large gathering. "I thought I was doing something very good for our Country," he wrote on Twitter.

The U.S. constitution's emoluments clause prohibits government officials from receiving salaries, fees or profits from foreign and domestic governments without congressional approval.

Watchdog group Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington said on Saturday the initial decision to award the event to a Trump property was "stunningly corrupt" but the "reversal shows that pressure works."

"The president deserves no plaudits for doing the right thing only after public outcry forced him not to do the wrong thing," it said.

Democrats have said they would investigate Trump's plan to host the G7 at his property after he floated the idea in August.

At least three dead in fires amid Chilean riots, flights out of Santiago delayed

A subway ticket booth is set ablaze in Chile as riots breakout over rising fares. GETTY IMAGES

At least three people died in supermarket arson attacks in Chile's capital Santiago, and soldiers shot two people during an operation to detain looters, authorities said, as protests entered their second week and intensified after a state of emergency was announced.

There was transport deadlock in the city and chaos at the international airport, where flights into and out of Santiago were suspended or canceled as crew members and airport staff were unable to get to work, the city's governor said.

Santiago and other Chilean cities have been engulfed by several days of riots as protests over an increase in public transport costs prompted President Sebastian Pinera to reverse the move and declare a state of emergency.

Santiago governor Karla Rubilar said on Sunday that three people died a day earlier after a supermarket in the San Bernardo district to the south of the city was set on fire by demonstrators.

Chile's Interior Minister Andrés Chadwick said later that two people died in the supermarket, while one was in hospital with serious injuries.

Prosecutor Xavier Armendáriz said a fourth person died in another fire at a supermarket in Matucana, in the center of Santiago.

By mid-afternoon on Sunday, prosecutors said 1,462 people had been charged in connection with that day's protests, 614 of them in Santiago. That followed 179 arrests in Santiago on Saturday.

Chadwick said more than 240 were taken into custody for violating a 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew for the capital that was announced on Saturday evening, the first since the end of the Augusto Pinochet dictatorship between 1973 and 1990.

The interior minister said he could not rule out extending the state of emergency declared for Santiago to Valparaíso, Bío Bío, Coquimbo and O'Higgins regions.

The military authorities mandated by Pinera with reestablishing order in Santiago said on Sunday they had shot and wounded two people before dawn in the impoverished La Pintana neighborhood during an attempt to detain people who ransacked a supermarket during the curfew.

One of the injured was a passenger in a car that drove at a military convoy and failed to heed warning shots, while the other was a bystander, the military said in a statement.

Walmart Chile confirmed said it had closed stores across the country after six were torched and 111 looted.

Flights operated by Chilean airlines LATAM and Sky Airline were suspended or delayed on Sunday morning after the curfew, a public transport shutdown and ongoing riots left flight crews struggling to get to work, Rubilar said.

Crowds of passengers were left stranded at the airport.

LATAM Chile said on Twitter that, due to the public order situation, flights into and out of the capital were affected.

"We will continue to adjust our itineraries of flights into and out of Santiago on Oct. 20 and 21," the airline said, adding passengers should check details before going to the airport. REUTERS

A Turkey-backed Syrian rebel fighter walks near Ras al Ain Town, Syria. REUTERS

Kurdish-led forces say they have pulled out of Syria border town

Withdrawal is the result of U.S.-brokered ceasefire deal.

The Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) said on Sunday they had withdrawn from the border town of Ras al Ain under a U.S.-brokered ceasefire deal, but a spokesman for Turkish-backed Syrian rebels said the withdrawal was not yet complete.

Ras al Ain is one of two towns on the Turkish-Syrian border that have been the main targets of Turkey's offensive to push back Kurdish fighters and create a more than 30 km (about 20 miles) deep "safe zone" inside Syria.

Turkey paused the offensive on Thursday night for five days under a deal agreed between President Tayyip Erdogan and U.S. Vice President Mike Pence. Erdogan has warned that Turkey will resume the assault when the deadline expires on Tuesday if the SDF had not pulled back from the safe zone area.

"We don't have any more fighters in the city," SDF spokesman Kino Gabriel said, referring to Ras al Ain. His comments came after Ankara said dozens of vehicles had entered and left Ras al Ain, which is largely surrounded by Turkish forces and their Syrian rebel allies, over the weekend.

Rebel spokesman Major Youssef Hamoud told Reuters that the SDF had "not yet completely" pulled out of Ras al Ain.

Turkey launched its offensive after President Donald Trump announced he was withdrawing U.S. troops from northeastern Syria. His move was criticized in Washington and elsewhere as a betrayal of Kurdish allies who had fought for years alongside U.S. troops against Islamic State.

Ankara is seeking to set up the zone as a buffer as it regards the YPG, the main component of the SDF, as a terrorist group because of its links to Kurdish insurgents in southeast Turkey. The YPG has been a close U.S. ally in the fight against Islamic State.

The U.S. pullout has also created a vacuum that Russia, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad's most powerful backer, has looked to fill. Syrian and Russian forces, invited by Kurdish authorities, last week entered two border cities of Manbij and Kobani that had been vacated by U.S. troops.

Erdogan has backed rebels fighting to oust Assad in the eight-year Syrian conflict, but has said Turkey has no problem with Syrian government forces deploying near the border if the YPG militia are removed.

The issue of YPG withdrawal from Manbij and Kobani would be discussed by Erdogan and Russian President Vladimir Putin at a meeting in the Russian city of Sochi on Tuesday, Turkish Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu said on Sunday.

> "We believe we can reach an agreement with them to work together in the future, just like we have before"
> Mevlut Cavusoglu

"We believe we can reach an agreement with them to work together in the future, just like we have before," Cavusoglu said. While Erdogan and Putin have close ties over defense and energy, Moscow has called the Turkish offensive into Syria "unacceptable" and said it should be limited.

Although the truce held for the first two days of the agreement, Turkey's defense ministry said on Sunday that a Turkish soldier was killed and another was wounded after a YPG attack with anti-tank and light arms hit a reconnaissance and surveillance mission in Tel Abyad, the other town seized by Turkey in its offensive.

It said Turkish forces had responded to the attack and said the YPG had committed 22 violations of the deal since it begun. REUTERS

Everything you need to know about the Disney+ streaming service

In case you didn't know, Disney is launching its own streaming service called Disney+.

Disney+ promises to have classics and a few new exclusives. ABC reported that Disney+ is expected to have more than 25 original series on the service in addition to ten original films.

Earlier this week the Disney+ Twitter account released a chronological list of everything the service has to offer. If you don't have the time to scroll that much, here's everything you need to know about the new streaming service.

How much does Disney+ cost?
You can pay for Disney+ monthly, or you can pay yearly. It will set you back $6.99 per month or $69.99 per year. It was also reported that people will be able to bundle it with their subscriptions to ESPN+ and Hulu with ads. This will cost $12.99 per month.

When does Disney+ start?
The streaming service launches on November 12.

How do I sign up for Disney+?
To sign up for Disney+, you can go to preview.disneyplus.com

What programming will be included in Disney+?
Disney+ will feature 25 original series and ten original films to start. Disney+ will have content from entertainment giants such as Disney, Pixar, Marvel, Star Wars and more. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Box Office: 'Maleficent: Mistress of Evil' dominates with soft $36 million

Five years after Angelina Jolie's "Maleficent" cast a spell over the box office, the villainous enchantress has returned to the top of domestic charts. Disney's "Maleficent: Mistress of Evil," a sequel to 2014's fantasy adventure based on the "Sleeping Beauty" sorceress, debuted to $36 million from 2,790 North American theaters, nearly half of what the first movie made in its inaugural weekend ($69 million).

Despite opening below projections heading into the weekend, "Maleficent: Mistress of Evil" easily towered over competition including holdover from Warner Bros.' "Joker" and newcomer Sony's "Zombieland: Double Tap." The "Maleficent" follow-up did benefit as one of the few offerings catering to younger female moviegoers in a marketplace that's been largely dominated by male-skewed titles like "Joker" and Paramount's "Gemini Man." Women represented 56% of ticket buyers, about 50% of which were under the age of 25.

New Sex Cream Works Like Magic for Older Men

Recent warnings on sex drugs leads to the creation of an amazing no pill option; key ingredients activate spencial sensation pathways, enhancing erections and triggering arousal

Daniel Watson
Medical News Today

BOSTON – The medical community now has a safer and more effective alternative to sex pills, which they can immediately start offering to male patients. It will not require a prescription.

The alternative, called Sensum+®, is an amazing new sex cream that activates a sensation pathway on the penis known as TRPA1.

When applied as directed, it leads to incredible arousal and much more satisfying erections.

It also promotes powerful climaxes and ultimately results in significant improvements in performance.

"Men can expect outstanding sexual improvements with regular use. The penis will become hyper sensitive, making them easily aroused and excitable" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the Boston based scientist who introduced Sensum+® to market.

"And that's because Sensum+® does what no other sex pill or drug has done before – it stimulates a special sensory pathway right below the skin, which leads to phenomenal sensation."

Overtime, constant exposure (especially if circumcised) leads to decreased penis sensitivity, which can cause problems with arousal and erection quality. There just isn't enough feeling to get excited."

"Diabetes, anti-depressants and normal aging also leads to desensitization, a can make the situation even worse."

"This is what makes Sensum+® so effective and why the clinical studies and clinical use studies have been so positive."

MISDIAGNOSIS LEADS TO UNEEDED PRESCRIPTIONS

After years of clinical research and testing, Dr. Esber and his team have discovered an incredible compound that triggers arousal while helping men achieve erections more easily.

This compound isn't a drug. It's the active ingredient in Sensum+®.

And according to users, it produces sensational results. Many men report remarkable improvements in sexual performance and overall satisfaction.

They are more sexually active than they've been in years with the average Sensum+® user over the age of 50.

Clinical studies show Sensum+®'s key ingredient activates the TRPA1 sensation pathway right below the skin of the penis.

According to research, many men adults and seniors who suffer sexually have lost sensation in their penis due to constant rubbing and exposure and health related issues such as diabetes, hernia surgery, use of some anti-depressants, multiple sclerosis, and other type of illnesses.

This desensitization often makes sex extremely challenging. Without a 100% feeling in the penis, its next to impossible to get truly aroused.

Worse, modern day sex drugs have absolutely no effect on sensation and are laden with side effects. They simply stimulate an erection by enhancing blood flow.

It's why most men are rarely satisfied after taking them and why Sensum+® users are always stocking up on more and couldn't be happier.

"We knew the science behind Sensum+® was there, but we never expected results like we're seeing. It's far exceeded our expectations" said a spokesperson for the company.

A STAGGERING 80% IMPROVEMENT IN SENSATIVITY

Researchers have conducted several clinical studies on Sensum+® and the results from the most recent are undoubtedly the most impressive.

A data analysis of three clinical surveys of 370 men showed that an amazing 80% of Sensum+® users experienced dramatic improvements while using the cream and as a result were aroused easier and a phenomenal boost in performance.

Additionally, 77.4% of men also reported much more satisfying climaxes, making sex for both them and their partners nearly 300% more satisfying.

"I have full feeling and sensitivity back in my penis. Everything feels better. My erections are harder, I'm more easily aroused, I can finally climax again. This stuff honestly works like magic in the bedroom. I couldn't be happier at 66!" raves one Sensum+® user.

HOW SENSUM + ® WORKS

Sensum+® is a new sex cream for men that's to be applied twice a day for the first two weeks then just once every day after.

There are no harmful side effects for either the user or partner. It also does not require a prescription.

The active ingredient is an organic compound known as cinnamaldehyde with a patented combination of sexually rousing extracts.

Research shows that as men get older, they often lose sensitivity to the penis.

Although very subtle, this desensitization can significantly hinder sexual performance and lead to serious problems with becoming aroused and staying/getting hard.

The cinnamaldehyde in Sensum+® is one of the only known ingredients to activate a special sensation pathway on the penis called TRPA1. Once activated, it restores tremendous sensation to the penis, stimulating arousal and powerful erections.

NEW SEX CREAM MAY REPLACE POPULAR SEX PILLS: This new patented clinically proven arousal cream is now available nationwide.

This would explain why so many users are experiencing impressive results so quickly and why the distributors of Sensum+® offer their low cost cream with an amazing guarantee.

GUARANTEE DISCOUNTED SUPPLY TAKES RISK OFF CONSUMERS

A large percentage of men report life changing results with Sensum+®. That's why it is now being sold with an above-industry standard guarantee.

"We can only make this guarantee because we are 100% certain this cream works," says Esber.

"We want to take risk off the consumers. So besides offering massive discounts, we're also offering this guarantee, so they don't have to risk a cent."

Here's how it works: Use the cream exactly as directed and you must feel a significant improvement in sexual sensations. You must be more easily aroused with harder, longer lasting erections and be having the best sex you've had in years.

Otherwise, simply return the empty bottles. Then, the company will refund your money immediately.

HOW TO GET SENSUM + ®

This is the official release of Sensum+®. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to any reader who calls within the next 48 hours.

A special hotline number and discounted pricing has been created for all Pennsylvania residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-515-0602 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Sensum+® is currently available in your region.

Consumers who miss out on our current product inventory will have to wait until more becomes available and that could take weeks. The company advises not to wait. Call 1-800-515-0602 today.

Dr. Neil deGrasse Tyson goes into the unknown

The famed scientist answers your questions and debunks Bigfoot in his new book, "Letters from an Astrophysicist."

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

During turbulent times, it's a normal reaction to search for meaning in a world that seems to be acting irrationally. Some people turn to religion, others to science and some just shut down completely. Famed astrophysicist and host of the shows "Cosmos" and "Star Talk" Dr. Neil deGrasse Tyson has been someone that many have looked to for answers to these questions over the years and in his newest book, "Letters from an Astrophysicist," Dr. Tyson lets his readers into some of the most intriguing pieces of correspondence he's had with fans throughout the years, as well as three open letters, including a eulogy to his late father. I caught up with the famed scientist over the phone to talk about the book while he was at work at the Hayden Planetarium, where he is the director of the Rose Center for Earth and Space, to talk about the new book.

What was the inspiration behind pulling back the curtain and letting people see these intimate conversations that you have with people in your new book?

Yeah, you said it precisely correctly. I've pulled back the curtain and the conversations cover topics that people rarely hear me discuss publicly. So it really is a behind the scenes, sort of under the hood, what's going on when I interact with people one on one.... There's about a hundred letters in the book, 101 letters to be precise, about 10% of the letters are from people who follow religious tradition and then they learned science and encounter a conflict and are now trying to understand how to reconcile; or they're forever at odds and they're reaching for some type of answer. Which I find to be humbling because these are people steeped in traditions that are very meaningful in their lives.

And I felt that, were I to engage them, I should do so in a way where I have some... where I've developed a sufficient knowledge of where they're coming from. No one is suicidal in the book. Just people wondering, looking for meaning and purpose in life and wondering whether any perspective that derives from the universe could inform it. And this is what happens persistently throughout the book.

And so I'm intrigued that people feel so comfortable that they would just bring these elements to it. And I've thought about it and I realized that most people - I think this is true - most people have never met a scientist, much less been able to claim one as a friend. So their exposure to me may be their only occasion to share something in their life with a scientist and that's what they've done.

I collected a few hundred of those letters and the 101 in this book are a culling from that set. So each correspondence has some value to more than the person who has received the answer. Letters that are different here at the fitness topic, I don't need to include those in the book. They'd be happy with the Wiki page answer. And in fact, I had staff that would reply to such letters, you know, "How big the universe is" or "Why is it expanding," the sort of thing. So this was a book of Q+A where you come to learn about astrophysics. It's a book of questions from people who found themselves in a certain place in life where they saw, they needed, they wanted a perspective that only the scientists could give.

Have you noticed that some of these questions have directed your own personal research? What have you learned from some of these questions?

So my religious literacy, or my "spiritual literacy" is derived entirely because I've been asked questions of people who come from that [religious] background. So after whatever might be the lead questions, I get asked scientific questions about the universe, or what's going on with black holes. In many cases by the fifth or sixth question people begin to branch in to "What does science say about God?" or "Who created the Universe, if not God?" So that becomes bland. There are many people who use that line of questioning that come my way. Originally, I was just sort of counting those questions as, "Well that's not science."

But then I thought to myself, when someone comes to me with whatever effort, especially if it's a handwritten or composed letter, I open up more than just saying, "Well this is science, and that's not." Whether you're an educator and they're a curious person, whether or not they're formally a student, the contract is: I should know where they're coming from. And that responsibility is on my shoulders, not theirs. So if someone is a fundamental Christian and asks me a question, I should know what is driving their thoughts. Because if I don't I will not otherwise know how to reach them with ideas, with thoughts and perspectives. So over the years I developed a huge library of different tracks to see where people were coming from, how and why, what they're saying, what they're not saying, what upsets them, what brings joy to them.

That background that I built over the years gives me the confidence in the conversation that I take back to people when they ask questions. And the same is true for UFOs and other paranormal phenomena. So a lot of my library is comprised of books that catch me up on where all of these people are coming from. And if you're in the book, you will see, I give very real attention to people who, in some circles, would just be considered crazy. Right? Well not crazy, but delusional. One person said, "Could there really be a large hairy ape wandering the Pacific Northwest?" So, I said, it's not likely and here's why: The rate of which we're discovering large animals in the world has dropped precipitously now that every place on earth has been explored.

So it's just less likely. And I gave a few more arguments and he writes back and says, "Tyson, as a scientist, I would have thought [you] would have been much more open-minded about this." He got a little angry. If you looking for Bigfoot, then you're not only looking for Bigfoot because it's a large hairy ape. There's got to be at least two of them, and they reproduce, because it's a mammal, if it's hairy, so it's got to be at least two. So that doubles your chances. Then they might have babies. So that triples your chances and you're not just looking for one Bigfoot. So I'm giving people attention, but I also know where they're coming from.

There's a huge backdrop that I've acquired over the years. Mostly the form of self-driven homework that I've conducted so that I can start with where they are and then take them to a new place; rather than require that they come to where I'm standing.

Dr. Tyson appears tonight at the Chevalier Theater, Medford, MA.

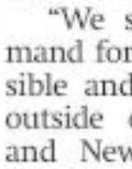
Let's face it

Heyday Salon, the modern facial shop is now open in Center City.



MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Heyday Salon is now open. PROVIDED

It's time to face the day Philadelphia – with a fresh new glow of course.

Heyday Salon, the moden facial shop redefining the skincare industry from coast to coast in the US is now setting up shop in the City of Brotherly Love.

Let's face it, sometimes the beauty industry and trying to juggle looking your best with self-care and taking time for yourself can be a challenge. Heyday wants to help, and they do so with a knowledgeable group of experts, affordable prices and accessibility to the best products on the market. Heyday utilizes their top-of-the-line resources to give each and every person individualized care and personalized tips on how to get your skin to reach its full potential.

"We saw a huge demand for Heyday's accessible and routine facials outside of Los Angeles and New York's metro area and naturally, we were drawn to our neighbors in Philadelphia. We are excited to join the fabric of this thriving health and wellness community and look forward to executing on our high-quality in-shop experience and unparalleled service standards that change the lives of our clients with both short- and long-term benefits," said Adam Ross, Co-founder and CEO of Heyday in a release.

Heyday emphasizes the ease and accessibility of their programs, so instead of a huge menu with a million different procedures that hardly make sense, this new beauty destination offers 30 Minute ($65), 50 Minute ($95), and 75 Minute ($140) facials with enhancements such as microdermabrasion, professional peels, LED light therapy and gua sha. The Skin Therapists at Heyday work with each customer to customize their treatment choosing from brands such as Naturopathica, Herbivore Botanicals, Supergoop!, Image Skincare and more. After you leave your session, the Skin therapists also send you an email with product recommendations, tips for upkeep, and advice for your specific skin type.

The light and airy design of the beauty venue only adds to the experience. You truly feel as though you are pampering yourself in a luxury environment without breaking the bank. There are eleven semi-private treatment rooms (with phone chargers in each) an area to freshen up, and a skincare-routine shopping experience in their front of the house.

According to the release, Heyday has membership plans available with discounted monthly facials and products, early access to shop news and events. Until the end of the year, a "founding membership" will be available at their Philadelphia store for early adopters, a first for the business.

New $500 free cash offer: Bet on MNF

Go to FanDuel.com/Metro to grab the free cash.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Before we get to the Monday Night Football betting preview, I should tell you about our new, exclusive $500 free cash offer.

Legal online sportsbooks are dishing out millions in free cash right now in an attempt to get sports bettors away from off-shore sites, and the most lucrative deal going at the moment comes via our affiliate partnership with FanDuel (available in PA and NJ).

Simply go to FanDuel.com/Metro and you can get up $500 in risk free cash.

The Patriots will be facing a different Jets team than they saw a month ago, as New York has built its confidence back up with the return of star quarterback Sam Darnold.

The Jets are also expected to get their top defensive player back in linebacker CJ Mosley.

Much has been made about Sam Darnold's excellent outing last Sunday against the Cowboys in which he threw for 338 yards and two touchdowns in a 24-22 New York victory. But facing a Patriots defense that is second in the NFL in fewest passing yards allowed per game (161.0), and one coached by Belichick instead of Jason Garrett should prove to be much more difficult for the second-year QB.

GETTY IMAGES

Before Darnold was diagnosed with mononucleosis this season, he played in the Jets' opening day loss to the Bills at home. Buffalo's defense, which is on par with the Patriots', held Darnold to just 175 yards of passing and New York was only able to manage 16 points on the day.

Darnold is often-times reckless with the football as he threw a whopping 15 interceptions in just 13 games last season (second in the NFL). The Cowboys defense also managed to pick him off last week.

Gotta imagine Devin McCourty is salivating over the possibility of adding to his league-leading interception total (4) tonight.

Meanwhile, Tom Brady has now thrown interceptions in his last three games after not throwing a pick in the team's first three games of the year. Brady needs to get back in the groove of things, even though he will throwing to a depleted receiving corps (Josh Gordon has been ruled out for Monday night with knee and ankle issues).

The good news for Brady is that he will facing a Gregg Williams defense as Brady has owned Williams over the years. Brady and the Pats are 9-2 all-time when facing a defense that has Williams on the staff. The Pats also typically do a good job when there is a large spread. They are 4-2 this year with mostly massive spreads and the only two exceptions (30-14 vs. Jets, 16-10 vs. Bills) narrowly missed on fluke plays.

The play: Patriots -9.5

TWEET OF THE DAY

Sean Zerillo
@SeanZerillo

Since 2005, home favorites are 16-3 (84.2 percent) in Games 1 and 2 of the World Series, winning by an average margin of 2.47 runs.

Best bets

World Series betting: Say no on sweep

The Astros are big-time favorites to take down the Nationals in the World Series as Houston has been installed at -240. Washington is +200 to win it all.

FanDuel.com/Metro has also opened up a prop bet that asks, "Will there be a Sweep in the World Series?"

Yes +650
No -1250

This is probably a stay-away despite the fact that Houston has seemed destined to take home the 2019 crown all year.

There has been just one World Series sweep in the past 10 years (Giants over Tigers in 2012), and the Nationals should be able to take a game or two here simply because they are one of the few teams in MLB that can at least challenge Houston in the pitching department.

I like the Astros to ultimately win this thing in six games, and for there to be a random MVP. Last year's World Series MVP was Boston bench player Steve Pearce, and Fall Classic history is littered with role players coming up big. Houston shortstop Carlos Correa – a fringe role player in Houston's stacked lineup - offers good odds right now to win MVP at +1200 odds.

The play: No WS sweep -1250, Astros -240, Carlos Correa MVP +1200

When could Phillies name new manager?

The Phillies are reportedly going to be naming their new skipper soon.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

While the dismissal of Gabe Kapler was drawn out, the naming of the new manager of the Philadelphia Phillies won't be.

NBC Sports' Jim Salisbury reported that the Phillies could name their manager quickly after interviewing three experienced candidates last week.

Monday saw the organization meet with Joe Girardi and Buck Showalter before speaking with Dusty Baker on Wednesday.

It is clear that the Phillies are looking for experience after failing to meet expectations with a first-time manager in Kapler — whose decision-making was constantly under the microscope by a fan base desperate to make the playoffs for the first time since 2011.

Between Girardi, Showalter, and Baker, there is over 50 years of managerial experience at the MLB level, providing the organization with a chance to hire its most experienced manager ever.

No Phillies manager has ever won a playoff series as an MLB skipper before joining the team.

While the market for Showalter and Baker includes other suitors, it looks as though Girardi is a strong candidate for not only the Phillies but also the NL East-rival Mets.

Girardi is the only manager of the three Phillies candidates to have won a World Series as a manager — winning a ring in 2009 with the Yankees.

And he was able to win a title in half the time it's taken Showalter and Baker, who have over 20 years of managerial experience apiece.

Girardi spent a decade in the Bronx, making the postseason six times while handling the largest market in North American sports.

To paraphrase Frank Sinatra: If he can make it there, he can make it anywhere, including Philadelphia.

But the strong interest from the Mets — who are also considering Carlos Beltran for the job — means the Phillies would have to make a decision quickly.

The problem is that the timing doesn't allow for many opportunities to do over the next week or so.

With the start of the World Series between the Astros and Nationals on Tuesday night, MLB teams usually don't make or announce big moves during benchmark events.

That could mean that if a Phillies decision is coming shortly, it could be during travel days of the series. The first is on Thursday, Oct. 24 when the World Series shifts from Houston to Washington, D.C. and on Monday, Oct. 28.

Slumping Flyers host Knights tonight

The Flyers have lost their last four games as Alain Vigneault tries to right the ship.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Flyers will try to snap a four-game skid tonight vs. Vegas. GETTY IMAGES

So much for that solid start.

After winning their first two games of the season, the Flyers have dropped four straight over the past week — a 4-1 loss to the Stars at home on Saturday further extending the futility.

It was a disappointing return to the Wells Fargo Center after a three-game Western Conference road trip that featured losses to the Canucks, Flames, and Oilers.

The offense has completely disappeared in the process as they're averaging less than two goals per game during this losing streak.

It wasn't for a lack of trying on Saturday, however.

The Flyers outshot Dallas 39-15, but the goaltending provided a start contrast.

Last year's Vezina Trophy runner-up, Stars goalie Ben Bishop, stood on his head while Philadelphia's young netminder, Carter Hart, made just 12 saves on the day.

The slump is already showing the true colors of first-year head coach Alain Vigneault, who seems to have had enough of the losing already.

"To be honest, it goes further that the losing streak," Flyers forward Kevin Hayes said (h/t Jack McCaffery, Daily Times). "He really doesn't tolerate bad play. He holds guys accountable, and you saw that."

Vigneault has continuously shuffled his lines throughout the early portions of this season and has kept Hart, at times, on a short leash in goal.

It shows a coach who is not settling for mediocrity, which must be a breath of fresh air for Flyers fans — who have lacked a consistent playoff contender in recent years.

The Flyers haven't made the postseason in consecutive seasons since 2007-2012 and are coming off their worst season since 2006-2007.

Hayes, who is in his first season with the Flyers, knows Vigneault as well as anyone after spending four seasons with the veteran bench boss in New York with the Rangers.

"I think fans and players and this organization should be happy that he wants to win like that. It's fun to play for a coach that wants to win every single night," Hayes said. "He doesn't accept losing. Obviously, you are not going to go 82-and-0, but he tries to lose as little games as possible. That's also another reason why I came here."

The Flyers have a tough test waiting for them on Monday night as they welcome the Vegas Golden Knights to Wells Fargo Center.

The Knights — who are expected to be a serious Western Conference contender this season — have won four of their last five games, including a 3-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins on Saturday.
